Wall Display Template Guide -- turn your Quick-Capture Timeline entries into a physical display

If you've used the Quick-Capture Timeline format, here's how to turn those entries into an actual printed display -- a simple, low-cost project for a family room or reunion.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

- Your finished Quick-Capture Timeline entries (date, location, event, why it mattered)
- A length of string, ribbon, or washi tape to act as the timeline's spine
- Index cards or cut cardstock, one per entry
- Small clips, pins, or tape to attach each card

HOW TO LAY IT OUT

1. Order chronologically, left to right

Arrange your entries by date so the display reads as a clear timeline of the whole story.

2. One card, one moment

Keep each card to a single timeline entry -- the date/location as a small header, then the event and why it mattered below.

3. Leave room to grow

Space entries out rather than packing them tight -- you'll likely add more moments later.

4. Add one photo per five or six entries

A few printed photos spaced along the timeline break up the text and anchor specific memories visually.
